Baader-Meinhof Leaders Sentenced to Life

The three surviving leaders of West Germany's Baader-Meinhof gang--Andreas Baader, Gudrun Ensslin and Jan-Carl Raspe--were sentenced to life imprisonment on 28 April for the murder of four U.S. servicemen in May 1972. Life imprisonment is the highest sentence that can be imposed in West Germany. The five-judge tribunal trying the trio also found them guilty on 34 other counts of attempted murder and of joining a criminal conspiracy against the state. The defendants, who are on a hunger strike in their cells, refused to appear in court to hear the verdict. The court's action brought to an end a trial that had begun nearly two years ago.

The case may not have run its course, however. The original chairman of the tribunal was dismissed on 20 January on a motion accusing him of prejudice after he had presided over most of the trial. On 17 March officials of the West German state of Baden-Wuerttemberg, where the trial took place, admitted in a press conference that the conversations of the defendants and their lawyers had been monitored by audio devices for a period of 22 days. (See the 23 March issue.) The judge's disqualification and the government's eavesdropping are expected to form the basis for defense appeals of the sentences.

The Baader-Meinhof gang was formed during the 1960s. It went underground in 1970. From that point until the three defendants were arrested in June 1972, the gang carried out a campaign of urban violence. Three bombs were exploded on 11 May 1972 in a U.S. Army officers club in Frankfurt, killing an American. On 24 May 1972 three other Americans were killed by bombs hidden in their automobiles at the U.S. Army's European Command headquarters in Heidelberg. After Baader and his associates were arrested for these acts, they were held for three years in pre-trial detention.

Although the Baader-Meinhof gang has lost most of its top leadership--co-founder Ulrike Meinhof committed suicide in her prison cell in May 1976 and Holger Meins died during a hunger strike in his cell--it has retained its ability to carry out terrorism. On 7 April Siegfried Buback, the chief prosecutor in the Baader-Meinhof trial, was assassinated in Karlsruhe by two terrorists on a motorcycle.

Cuban Training for Latin Americans

[redacted] Latin American terrorists continue to be trained by the Cuban armed forces. [redacted] there is a training center for the terrorists--who may number as many as 350 at a given time--located in Havana province. There they attend a three-month training session which includes instruction in guerrilla tactics, sabotage techniques and deception operations. Some terrorists have also received traditional military training--parachute jumping and training with tanks.

Extraordinary security precautions are said to be taken to compartmentalize various training groups. If the groups meet socially, they are forbidden to discuss their activities with each other. Cuban guards and instructors are present at the gatherings to enforce security. Once training is completed and the terrorists return to their own or a third country, they are instructed not to discuss their Cuban experiences with members of their own organizations.

The largest Latin American group to have received training appears to have been the Tupamaros of Uruguay.

[redacted]

25X1

The Tupamaros and the ELN both are members of the Revolutionary Coordinating Junta (JCR) and that organization has provided the ELN trainees with documentation, safe haven and other support in Europe prior to their return home. It presumably has done the same for the Tupamaros.

Niehous Reward Withdrawn

Mrs. Donna L. Niehous has withdrawn her offer of a reward of nearly U.S. $500,000 for information on the whereabouts of her husband, William Niehous, former manager of the Owens-Illinois complex in Venezuela. [REDACTED]

Mrs. Niehous, of Toledo, Ohio, announced her decision in a letter written to a Caracas daily newspaper reporter who has closely followed the 14-month-old kidnap case. "I continue to hold the strong belief that my husband is alive," she wrote. "However, eight months have passed since my offer was made [REDACTED] and no one has come forward to help me; it is obvious that the offer of such a substantial sum of money no longer serves any useful purpose." Hijack Attempt at Rome Airport

A knife-wielding Libyan boarded and seized Iberian Airlines flight 352 after it landed in Rome from Madrid on 2 May. The Libyan, identified as Abu Aysha Ali Fargani, told the pilot that he had brought explosives aboard and would blow up the plane unless he was flown immediately to Madrid. He permitted the passengers to get off but kept the pilot, co-pilot and navigator as hostages.

Airport authorities said that the pilot turned a fire extinguisher on the would-be hijacker when police outside the aircraft managed to divert his attention. He was then overpowered and arrested. In a statement to police after his capture, Fargani claimed that he wanted to see his fiancée in Bilbao but had been denied entry into Spain on an earlier flight because he had no money. [REDACTED]

Other newspapers, with a lone exception, have given only modest mention to the appearance of the manifesto. ARTICLESWhite House Replies to Hijacked Soviets

Two crew members of a Soviet airliner hijacked to Turkey recently wrote to President Carter demanding that the hijackers, who are in the U.S., be returned to the Soviet Union. (See the issue of 30 March.) The following reply has been sent to the crew members by a White House staff assistant.

"Dear Mr. Shavidze and Mr. Babayan:

"I am writing in reply to your letter of March 23 to President Carter concerning the case of Algirdas and Pranas Brazinskas, who were involved in the skyjacking of your aircraft from the Soviet Union to Turkey in 1970. They were also held responsible for the senseless death of a stewardess aboard your aircraft. Under the circumstances it is very easy for me to understand your concern about this case and I welcome this opportunity to explain our position on such acts of international terrorism.

"The United States government unalterably opposes the use of terrorist tactics--including the hijacking of aircraft--for any purpose. As a party to the Hague Convention we recognize such acts to be criminal and we subscribe to the principle that the perpetrators of such acts should be prosecuted.

"In the case of Algirdas and Pranas Brazinskas, you should be aware that upon their arrival in Turkey they were arrested and prosecuted. They were released under a general amnesty and confined to a refugee camp. Subsequently they travelled to Venezuela. However, on August 25, 1976, they illegally entered the United States while in transit to Canada. They were arrested and are now the subjects of deportation hearings in New York and Boston. Their request for political asylum in the United States was rejected on the grounds that their act constitutes a serious non-political crime. If they are found deportable, the United States authorities would presumably seek to deport them to the country of last previous residence--in their case Venezuela--in accordance with United States law.

Norwegian Arrested for Carrying Explosives at Beirut Airport

According to a Reuter press release, Lars Gule, a Norwegian, was arrested on 6 May at the Beirut airport for carrying plastic explosives and detonators. Customs officers found 25 ounces of plastic hidden in a book in his luggage as he prepared to board a Lebanese airliner for Frankfurt. He had obtained the explosives from a man named Ahmad in Beirut, but gave no indication of what he planned to do with them.

This is the fourth incident since 30 December 1976 of persons attempting to carry weapons and explosives aboard Middle East Airlines planes departing Beirut.

Kidnaped American Boy Still Missing

An Argentinian, whose two-year-old son--a U.S. citizen--was kidnaped near Buenos Aires last September, has now decided that public knowledge of his son's U.S. citizenship would not be prejudicial to his safety. The father, Raul Kraiselburd, publisher of "El Dia," a well-known Argentinian newspaper, recently told U.S. officials in Buenos Aires that the Kraiselburd family is appealing throughout Latin America for information on his son David's whereabouts. Kraiselburd also said he is receiving anonymous mail which indicates David is in Uruguay.

David was abducted from outside the family home in La Plata, near Buenos Aires, on 1 September 1976. Initial demands from the kidnapers included a ransom payment of $200,000.

Trial Opens in Death of Ambassador Davies

Three Greek Cypriots accused of the fatal shooting of Ambassador Roger Davies went on trial in Nicosia on 9 May. (See the issue of 8 February.) Ambassador Davies was killed in August 1974 during a riot directed against the U.S. embassy following the Turkish invasion of Cyprus. On the second day of the trial, the court received testimony from a police inspector that he had seen one of the defendants carrying an automatic weapon near the embassy during the disturbance. The three men, a mechanic and two former policemen, have pleaded not guilty to the charges brought against them. [ ]

Attempted Hijacking Foiled

On ~~18~~<sup>8</sup> May, Bruce John Trayer, a 25-year-old U.S. citizen, attempted to hijack Northwest Airlines flight 22 bound from Tokyo to Honolulu. About one hour after leaving Tokyo, Trayer grabbed a stewardess and holding a razor to her throat attempted to divert the 747 jet with its 261 passengers to Moscow. The pilot radioed that a hijacking was underway and requested directions for a flight to Moscow. About ten minutes later the pilot reported that the hijacker had been subdued after being hit over the head by the purser who utilized the blunt end of the aircraft's fire-axe. The hijacker required medical attention when the plane returned to Tokyo, where authorities took him into custody.

Trayer had arrived in Tokyo on 6 May without a visa and on 8 May he attempted to board a plane to the USSR without the required Soviet visa. Airport authorities later placed Trayer on the Northwest flight to the U.S. [ ]

Israel recently announced that an official German representative could be present at the trial. The Israelis are also holding three Palestinians on the same charges. Convicted Philippine Embassy Attacker Declared Not Guilty After New Trial

Napoleon Lechoco, a Philippine lawyer imprisoned in 1975 as a result of his attack on the Philippine embassy in Washington, D.C., was declared not guilty by reason of insanity, at a retrial on 3 May 1977. Lechoco had held Philippine Ambassador Romauldez and an aide hostage in the embassy for several hours on 19 November 1974, and surrendered only after his demand that his son be allowed to leave the Philippines was granted. (See the 19 November 1974 issue.) Lechoco was sentenced in August 1975 to a prison term of up to ten years.

However, in September 1976, the U.S. Court of Appeals ordered a new trial to determine Lechoco's sanity on the grounds that certain defense witnesses had been excluded from the portion of the earlier trial which dealt with his sanity. The new verdict was based on evidence that Lechoco was suffering from "gross stress reaction" because the Philippine government would not allow his son to travel to the U.S. This reaction made him temporarily insane and thus not responsible for his actions. As a result of this new ruling, Lechoco will receive a psychiatric examination to determine his present mental condition, and based on the findings, will be either committed to an institution or released. It is believed likely that Lechoco will be released after the psychiatric evaluation.

West German Terrorist Klein Abandons Terrorism?

A letter purported to be from Hans-Joachim Klein, West German terrorist best known for his participation with Carlos in the December 1975 attack on the Vienna OPEC meeting, has been received by the German magazine "Der Spiegel." Klein claims in the letter to have become disillusioned with terrorism and says he has broken with his former colleagues. Klein also revealed that there is a terrorist plan to kill two West German Jewish leaders--Heinz Galenski of West Berlin and Ignaz Lipinski of Frankfurt--and said he hoped to prevent their murders by exposing the plot. Police have placed the two men under heavy security guard.

Klein's revolver with ammunition and a set of his fingerprints accompanied the letter to prove its authenticity.

USIS Cultural Center in Madrid Bombed

A powerful bomb exploded at the USIS Cultural Center in Madrid in the early morning hours of 17 May, causing extensive damage to the building but no serious injuries.

In a phone call to a Madrid paper, the Groups of Antifascist Resistance-First of October (GRAPO) claimed responsibility for the attack. Although the explosion occurred shortly before Vice President Mondale's arrival in Madrid, there was no indication it was related to Mondale's visit.

The CORU Perspective

In an interview conducted inside his Caracas jail cell sometime in late March, Cuban exile leader Orlando Bosch is quoted as claiming personal involvement in a wide range of terrorist incidents. He allegedly said that two Cuban diplomats missing since August 1976 in Buenos Aires were murdered as a result of a personal arrangement with an

Dutch-Moluccan Confrontation

The current siege of a South Moluccan-held train and schoolhouse in the northern part of the Netherlands may become a long drawn out affair. The terrorists laid down a 25 May deadline for the Dutch authorities to comply with their demands. The authorities initially refused to discuss anything until 105 children being held in the schoolhouse were released. Nevertheless, officials did begin negotiating with the terrorists on the afternoon of 25 May using four jailed South Moluccans as intermediaries.

The incident began on 23 May when a man and a woman riding the train pulled the emergency cord at a prearranged spot near Groningen. Five other armed terrorists then emerged from a wooded area and boarded the train. In the confusion that followed, some of the passengers were able to escape from the train. Another 34 people, mostly elderly men and women, were released shortly afterwards. The remaining passengers--press reports of their numbers range from 50 to 80--were forced into one of the cars.

About an hour after the train had been hijacked, six gunmen stormed the school, which is located in a South Moluccan neighborhood in the village of Bovensmilde. Fifteen Moluccan students were immediately released and the remaining 105 students and six teachers were held. As was the case with the train, the terrorists papered over the windows in the areas where the hostages are being detained.

The terrorists have threatened to kill the children as well as passengers aboard the train if the government does not follow a scenario laid out in detail in a letter mailed to authorities before the incident began. They are demanding that two groups of South Moluccans, currently being held in Dutch jails for earlier terrorist incidents, be taken to a small airfield near the hijack and kidnap sites and then flown to Amsterdam. A third group of prisoners is to be taken directly to the airport in Amsterdam. A jumbo jet is to be made ready to fly all of the South Moluccans to an undisclosed destination. The terrorists have further demanded that the government announce its acceptance of the terms over the radio and television.

The government does not appear ready to make any concessions to the terrorists. At the same time Dutch authorities are anxious not to provoke the terrorists into acts of violence. They prefer a tactic of attrition which proved effective in a similar incident with South Moluccan terrorists in December 1975. Although a number of gunshots within the schoolhouse have been heard, it is unclear whether there have been any casualties thus far.

The South Moluccans are natives of a group of islands around Ambon in east Indonesia, whose inhabitants have been close to the Netherlands since the colonial days of the Dutch East Indies. Following an unsuccessful attempt to create a South Moluccan Republic in 1950--it was militarily crushed by Indonesia--12,000 of the South Moluccans were taken to the Netherlands. The exile community now numbers 40,000. The South Moluccans--especially the younger elements--have resisted assimilation into Dutch society and have sought to win support for their cause of independence from Indonesia.

Since 31 August 1970 the South Moluccans have been involved in a number of incidents in the Netherlands. On that date 33 of them occupied the Indonesian embassy killing one policeman. A month later a raid against a Moluccan camp resulted in the capture by Dutch authorities of small arms, ammunition and hand grenades. Again, on 10 May 1974 a police raid against the residence of a South Moluccan led to the recovery of a quantity of weapons and ammunition that had been stolen from a Dutch military camp. In December 1974 a mob of South Moluccans firebombed The Hague Peace Palace and in April 1975 ten were arrested for plotting to kidnap Queen Juliana.

In their most spectacular previous incident, in December 1975, the terrorists simultaneously hijacked a train in the northern part of the Netherlands and occupied the Indonesian

Cypriot Court Sentences Two in Ambassador Davies Case

On 20 May the prosecutor in the trial of three accused murderers of Ambassador Roger Davies withdrew several charges which were pending against one of the defendants. Loizos Savva pleaded guilty to rioting after charges of possession of arms, manslaughter, destruction, and setting the U.S. embassy at Nicosia on fire, were dropped. Savva was sentenced to eight months imprisonment, effective 4 February 1977, the date of his arrest. The court imposed three months in prison on another of the defendants, Khristakis Kharalambous, for possessing dynamite and for rioting.

American Kidnap Victim Released in Colombia

Gustavo Curtis, an American manager of the Colombian subsidiary of Beatrice Foods, was released the night of 18-19 May, according to Colombian police. Curtis was kidnaped on 28 September 1976 in downtown Bogota as he was returning home from work. (See the issues of 5 and 12 October and 9 November 1976.)

The identity of the kidnapers is still unknown. Press reports at the time of the abduction blamed the act on pro-Communist terrorists. There has been no information in the Colombian press regarding any payments of the ransom which was demanded shortly after the kidnaping.

Stomach Pumps--New Weapon in Counterterrorism Arsenal

The Argentine government element responsible for operations against subversives has recently included in its task force a medical detachment which can provide prompt emergency treatment to terrorists who have swallowed cyanide pills, according to a U.S. military report. For the past year or so, Argentine terrorists have been carrying lethal pills to take in the event capture appears inevitable. After several incidents in which terrorists avoided capture by committing suicide in this manner, Argentine security forces outfitted an emergency medical unit with an ambulance carrying stomach pumping equipment in an attempt to save the lives of terrorists who had taken cyanide capsules. Government counter-subversive forces have reportedly experienced a great deal of success in reviving terrorists through the use of this new technique.
